Betty, Gets A Booty at SPCA Florida

Lakeland, FL— Transferred in from a Florida partner shelter, Betty, a 1-year-old Terrier Mix, needed some extensive reconstruction surgery, which SPCA Florida could provide. Betty had congenital rectovaginal fistula with atresia ani. In other words, her colon connected directly to her vagina which led to multiple urinary tract infections.

“This is a rare congenital deformity,” said Dr. Dorian Lara, Director of Surgical Services at SPCA Florida Medical Center. “Betty needed two surgeries to correct the anatomic defects and make her as normal as possible. “While her surgeries were considered an overall success (the plumbing was re-routed to its correct location), she will likely never be fully normal in regard to defecation. She needs a devoted family to make her a special diet for each meal, along with multiple walks every day to help avoid complications (severe constipation),” explained Dr. Lara.

Despite Betty being born with only one resource for elimination verses two., this little pup has a spunky, full of life, loving personality. Besides being walked, an ideal situation would be a doggy door to a fenced in yard or patio with a grass area to urinate often.

This vibrant canine needs a caregiver who has a lot of time to spend with her at home, and patience to properly maintain her diet. Betty has decided she wants to be a lap dog and would prefer to have all the attention, because at this time, she thinks she deserves it – and we agree.
